❖ Conclusion:

From the study undertaken, it is concluded that though at the beginning of the covid pandemic, there has been adverse effect of the business of life insurance sector, it's scope has been widen at the later stage. Covid-19 has posed a sudden and unexpected shock to insurance industry. There has been huge financial impact of Covid-19 on business of life insurance sector. The profits are dropped considerably. There has been reduction in market share held by the companies. The different factors such as liquidity, risk portfolio, etc. have affected the insurance companies. Despite of the downfall faced, a quick recovery is expected due to emerging changes in life insurance sector. Most of the insurance companies have started working from remote location. The IT and security protocols have been also enhanced. The insurance companies should come up with customer centric products that can provide them assurance of financial security of their loved ones during such pandemic situation.

❖ Recommendation:

Covid 19 has changed the perception of individuals regarding life insurance. This is a great opportunity for the insurance company to increase the insurance penetration and expand their business. The business firms should come up with innovative ideas and customer centric products which assures the insured that his financial dependents are secured behind him.

- Robotic surgery: Adds control, precision, and flexibility to a surgeon's hands to operate as non-invasively as possible to a patient. It has allowed making certain operations easier or even possible.
- Health wearables: Began as a fitness tracker to track heart rate and pace, they highlighted healthcare potential. Health wearables can detect cardiovascular anomalies earlier and prevent severe conditions.
- Virtual reality (VR): VR is being used heavily in recent years but mainly for entertainment purposes. However, virtual reality can help medical students have "real life" experiences in procedures and visual understanding of human anatomy.
- Telehealth: It is a very up-and-coming market that allows patients receive medical care through digital devices. Patients can easily have access to their doctor while they can receive a diagnosis and medical advice.

Details regarding their experience in using the electronic health record system, automated physician order/instructions, the easy accessibility over their duty mobiles against their conventional on call via an attendant system and convenience regarding the online accessibility of laboratory investigation reports. The final outcomes regarding its usefulness in the patient's health was measured by using the tool of monthly mortality report from those departments (Medicine, Surgery, Orthopaedic, Neurosurgery, Emergency medicine, Pathology and from Anaesthesia and Critical care Departments) where such an electronic system was used compared to those departments (Ophthalmology, Otorhinolaryngology, Paediatrics, Psychiatry and Obstetrics and Gynaecology) where it was not used. All these data were noted, compiled and analysed.

Thus we have made a survey of it and has gotten information about the opinions of people about IT and Technologies usage in Medical industry and we found out couple interesting things that made our conclusion about how technology is important in our healthcare industry. We have also included the situation we face in pandemic since usage of technology is more in that period so we have got mixed opinion from different places right from village areas to city so it has helped me to understand the difficulties also which some people faced while using technological services for healthcare.

Was technology effective in pandemic to all of us ?

MATERIALS AND METHODS:

The Healthcare Challenge Area aims to optimise the efficacy of medical-interventions and drug delivery devices through a combination of cell biology and innovative development of novel materials and structures. Our vision encompasses projects that address specific clinical needs, through to those that offer a novel technological "push" - with corresponding levels of translation readiness. The research includes strong outward linkages with clinicians, biologists, biochemists, physicists, chemists and engineers.

Applications include, devices for neural conduits, dermal grafts, cardiovascular patches, orthopaedic implants, model systems for the development of cancer therapies, bioreactor substrates, sensing and analysis, materials and strategies for wound healing, pharmaceutical materials science, monitoring equipment-related hardware and healthcare photonics.

This volume summarizes recent developments in the use of new materials and technologies in healthcare. The emphasis is on new approaches that incorporate bioactive materials and scaffolds with cells in the emerging technologies of tissue engineering and regenerative medicine. The incorporation of nanotechnology, stem cells, and gene control of cells is included in the current research discussed. Clinical applications are described throughout the volume, along with economic and bioethics issues. The chapters are organized into four sections of clinical needs and an overview that summarizes the technologies that provide new approaches to clinical problems. The clinical areas addressed are Skeletal and Skin Repair, Heart and Cardiovascular Repair, Neuronal Repair, and Sensory Repair.

As per the survey and as we have got results everyone has given positive answers. Since in the 1st question we had question asking about importance of technology in healthcare industry and more than 64% peoples are strongly agreeing to it followed by rest 35% just agreeing peoples thus we have asked in upcoming questions about the benefits and usage of technology in daily life thus accordingly we have asked questions regarding technologies usage in day to day life including our schedules and we have got responses on usage of technology in being healthy which are as follows:

Which of the following things you do with the help of devices for your health ?

50 responses

Thus we can see that peoples are getting benefitted by using technical products in their lives also we have got more than 86% of people are getting benefitted by using technology and also some have benefitted but also they have faced some difficulties while using technology in health industry. Technologies usage in remote is far less than the usage in urban countries and that's why as per the survey people thinks that government should look in to such affairs and they should run campaign so people should get more and more benefitted via using such services in their day to day life. We also have got public's observation on technology in healthcare services and some of their responses are as follows:

- Technology has helped a lot in healthcare services. New technology has come in healthcare services and it helped a lot to doctors and patients also.
- Technology in health care services has helped people to get health related results within 24 hrs instead of 5 to 7 days more accurate results can be obtained also medicines are also available through mobile apps even doctors are attending to their patients' needs online.
- Nowadays the technology has grown so much that new equipment are used to check in which part of our body the issue is. So the best use of technology is happening in healthcare services.
- The feedbacks which we see is not real as mentioned sometimes.

On 25th March 2022, The Department of Computer Science(SIES College) organized a field visit to D.Y Patil College "The School of Ayurveda" to highlight the importance of - How Ayurveda and Technology can go hand-in-hand in today's modern era of Science. Around 28 students of FY, SY and MSc along with 5 faculty members of the department participated in the visit. The event started at around 9 a.m in the morning where the students visited the Herbal Garden of D.Y Patil College. Beautiful posters stating the importance of Ayurveda were displayed by the students during the visit. There was an interaction between the Faculty members of the herbal garden and the students where several use cases regarding the combination of technology and ayurveda were discussed. The discussion pointed towards - How AI and ML can be used to detect the names and images of a given plant using the Google lens, the development of a system where the nature of the plants(Ushna/Sheeta nature) can be detected with the use of a camera, creation of datasets of the ayurvedic plants and automatic machine translation of the plant names to its sanskrit/scientific notations. After the discussion the student entered the Herbal Garden where a variety of Ayurvedic plants were naturally grown in a controlled environment. The Teachers explained the use cases of each plant along with its ayurvedic importance. Students were also educated about how such plants focus on natural healing, building a balance in the human body with the use of diet, herbal medicine to heal mind, body and spirit. Such an experience to visit a herbal garden with a huge, variety of Ayurvedic plants was appreciated by the students. Some of the plants grown there were Amla(Amalika, Phyllanthus emblica), Ashwagandha (Withania somnifera), Camphor(Cinnamomum camphora), Red Sandalwood(Rakhtachandan, Pterocarpus santalinus), Bhringraj (Eclipta prostrata) and many more which cannot be witnessed by common people in urban premises. The visit was a great success and it was the most informative ayurvedic visit ever witnessed by a Computer science

3. Output Layer: This is the layer where the final output is extracted from what's happening in the previous two layers. In case of regression problems, the output layer will have one neuron.

Inception V3 (CNN)

The model itself is made up of symmetric and asymmetric building blocks, including convolutions, average pooling, max pooling, concatenations, dropouts, and fully connected layers. Batch normalization is used extensively throughout the model and applied to activation inputs. Loss is computed using SoftMax.

CNN: A convolutional neural network is a specific kind of neural network with multiple layers. It processes data that has a grid-like arrangement then extracts important features.

Convolutional layers represent the presence of features in an input image. But they present a problem, they're sensitive to location of features in the input. This gives us specific data rather than generalized data, deepening the problem of overfitting and doesn't deliver good results for data outside the training set.

Pooling: To generalize the presence of features. This is done by means of pooling layers.

Concat: It takes as input a list of tensors, all of the same shape except for the concatenation axis, and returns a single tensor that is the concatenation of all inputs.

Dropout: refers to data, or noise, that's intentionally dropped from a neural network to improve processing and time to results.

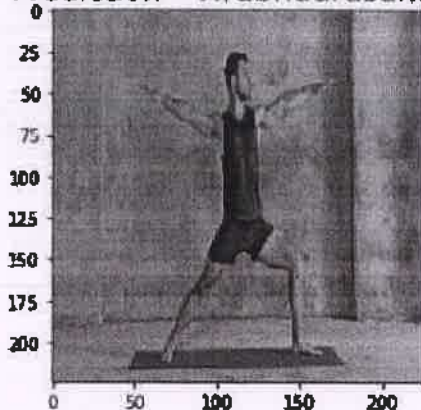

SoftMax: It is mainly used to normalize neural networks output to fit between zero and one. It is used to represent the certainty "probability" in the network output.

Limitation & Future Scope:

The current model lacks Real Time Monitoring of Yoga Postures. In future this model can help to predict postures in real time to help performers

Using IOT this model can be useful for performers to analyze their yoga routine like today we have Different modes in Smart fit bands showing their activity same way it can include as a new function in bands helping the yoga performers.

Conclusion: The model can successfully predict yoga postures using inception v3 pretrained model. It can help yoga practioner to identify yoga postures easily. With overcoming present limitations this model can be upgraded to make a full fledge user friendly application.

Date- 29th July 2021

Objective- To familiarize the new faculties with the nature of job, work environment and the organisation.

On July 29, 2021, IQAC hosted an orientation programme to welcome the newly joined faculties. Dr. Koel Roychoudhury, Principal, ASCN, gave an opening statement to start off the event. She discussed the function and significance of teachers in students' lives. He also emphasised that the use of online teaching-learning methodologies was made more urgent by the global pandemic and is expected to continue even after COVID-19. In order to equip themselves with the abilities needed to create a comprehensive learning environment in these conditions, faculties need to evolve a novel approach more than before. Ms. Bhumika More, IQAC Member, gave a detailed Powerpoint presentation covering information about SIES trust, organisation structure, committees, several important activities, research policy, HR policy, Documentation etc .

The programme was attended by 3 new recruited faculties which helped them to learn more about their roles and also enlightened them on institution's practices. Concise information about the institution will help new faculties to adopt to new workplace.
